

Pink Lily of the Valley

Convallaria Majalis Var. 'Rosea'

- Plants form a clump of large green leaves, bearing short spikes of fragrant baby-pink bells in late spring. Delightful and rather rare variation on an old-fashioned favourite.
- Clumps take a year or two to establish, then spread at a steady pace, in time forming a sizeable patch.
- Tolerant of poor soils, even dry shade, but prefers a rich, moist soil. Protect from afternoon sun. Plants sometimes become dormant in summer.
- Wonderfully fragrant ground cover for shady areas
